

Ph.D. Field Requirements

For students entering the program Fall 2018 and later.

CORE COURSE REQUIREMENTS

OTHER REQUIRED COURSES

AMERICAN POLITICS

251. American Political Institutions
 AND
 252. American Politics: Behavior
 OR
 257. Voting and Elections

1. Two graduate seminars numbered
 POLI 252-257 and 261-265
 POLI 259s or other courses may be used by petition to the American Field Coordinator.
 2. Methods Requirement:
 POLI 204B
 POLI 271
 AND
 One additional approved methods or analytical theory course to be completed before advancement to candidacy

COMPARATIVE POLITICS

220B. Comp Politics: Institutions
 AND
 220A. Comp Politics: State and Society

1. At least one seminar in political development, democratization, or regime change
 2. One additional seminar in comparative politics

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

240. International Relations Theory

Three graduate seminars numbered:
 POLI 232, 236–248
 GPS courses: With prior written approval of the IR Field Coordinator, students may take GPS courses that (1) have sufficient int'l content, and (2) incorporate additional requirements for PhD students
To be taken for at least one year:
 283. Workshop in Int'l Relations

POLITICAL METHODOLOGY	270. Mathematical and Statistical Foundations. 271. Advanced Statistical Applications	Two graduate seminars from the POLI 270-279 range, such as: POLI 277 Measurement Theory POLI 279 T/Social Network Analysis POLI 279 T/Graphical Models and Statistical Learning
POLITICAL THEORY	Either: FOUR courses numbered 210-219 OR THREE courses numbered 210-219 and one POLI 298 with prior approval of theory field coordinator	With prior written approval from the field coordinator, students may replace up to two courses numbered POLI 210-219 with courses from a cognate discipline (e.g., philosophy or sociology). Please note: courses from a cognate discipline will not meet the general departmental requirement that students complete 15 quarter courses offered within the department.